MILITARY LAW AND ITS TRIBUNALS

By Colonel JOHN I. ROGERS, former Judge Advocate General National Guard of Pa.

THIS paper will have at least the merit of novelty, which justifies its preparation.

There is, perhaps, no branch of our jurisprudence about which the bar in general knows so little and cares less, than that of Military Law.

It is doubtful if a majority of my auditors have ever given it the slightest study, or evinced more than a passing interest in its manifestation and development. This cannot be due to the lack of interest of lawyers in military affairs, for the rosters of the rank and file of our volunteer armies in every war and of the uniformed militia of every State of the Union have a goodly proportion of the members of our profession, and first-class soldiers they invariably make.

No, the explanation—if any can be made—perhaps lies in the very bad inter- and post-bellum reputation, which military Tribunals of the United States Army have usually left behind them.

To the trained lawyer, sworn to uphold the Constitution and laws of both Nation and State, who regards precedents and forms as the palladiums of personal and proprietary rights, there is something repulsive about Military Commissions and Drum-Head Courts Martial, seemingly organized to convict, proclamations of martial law "in disaffected districts," suspensions of the habeas corpus, the substitution of Military Governors and Provost Marshals for Legislatures, Executives and Judiciary and the disappearance of civil processes and trial by jury down the barrel of the rifle or the scabbard of the sabre.

And more recent echoes from the guard-house, of the clank of ball and chain and spectacles of the hanging by the thumbs, and of the half-shaven sconce and plucked-off buttons of the convict, as he makes his exit out of camp to the tune of the "Rogues' March," and of that still more modern and refined inventive cruelty, "the water cure" in the Philippines, are not calculated to remove earlier and well-grounded impressions, that military law and its tribunals are outside the pale of the Civil Law and only tolerated, in times of war on the plea of necessity.

LIEUT. COLONEL WILLIAM T. LINDSEY
AIDE-DE-CAMP, STAFF OF COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF

It is not my purpose, nor within the scope of this article, to contradict facts or dispute conclusions inferable therefrom, but if some of the prejudices, however originally justified, can be removed by a brief synopsis of the reformation of abuses and of the jurisprudential progress in Military Tribunals, of our Federal and State soldiery, it may arouse some interest in this body and elicit its powerful co-operation with those, that believe that reform is ever doing, never done—never resting on the laurels of accomplishment and therefore the antipodes of inertia.

Much has been achieved, in this behalf, in the regular army and especially in the National Guard of Pennsylvania, in the last two decades, mainly by a very few lawyers connected with the Departmental Staffs of our State and Nation. Much more is to be done in the next two decades towards approximate perfection by the aid, we may hope, of lawyers, now within the sound of my voice. To get down to my subject, military law, in its proper meaning, must not be confounded with either military government or with, what is known as martial law, each of which is frequently confused with the other, by many commentators and text-book writers. Military government is exercised over foreign territory and, from a belligerent standpoint, districts occupied by rebels are, according to the Federal Supreme Court, necessarily foreign territory. Martial law, on the contrary, is limited, in its exercise, to domestic or home jurisdiction. The former is the will or whim of a conqueror, without responsibility to any one except his commander-in-chief and perhaps to that very vague and indefinite nebula, the Law of Nations.

Martial law, however, is reviewable, not only by superior military authority, but by the civil courts, when they again resume jurisdiction. However, for the present purposes, they may be briefly considered and classified together, as did the Duke of Wellington in the House of Lords, during the debate in 1851, on the Ceylon Rebellion. Said His Grace:

"I contend that martial law is neither more nor less than the will of the general who Commands the army. In fact, martial law means no law at all. Therefore, the general who declares it and commands that it be carried into execution, is bound to lay down distinctly the rules and regulations and limits, according to which his will is to be carried out."

Even the Iron Duke's frank and candid definition savors of inconsistency; for, if it is "neither more nor less than the will of the general," it would seem superfluous to hamper his own sweet will with rules and regulations repealable by said same will.

However, it matters not, whether the term military government or martial law is used, the character of the jurisdiction is that of a war power, arising from the authority of a conqueror, to whom the conquered people, nolens volens, must, for the time being, owe at least paramount allegiance and obedience.

Indeed, in the wake of a victorious army, with the smoke of conflict still clouding the horizon, the government by the sword is often the only preventive of anarchy and the conservator of the liberties and properties of the inhabitants. Said the Supreme Court of the United States in Horn v. Lockhart (17 Wallace 580):

"The existence of a state of insurrection and war does not loosen the bonds of society or do away with civil government, or the regular administration of the law. Order must be preserved, police regulations maintained, crimes prosecuted, contracts enforced, marriages celebrated, estates settled and the transfer and descent of property regulated precisely as in times of peace."

This decision followed the modern theory of what military government and martial law should be the exponents, notwithstanding the numerous failures of its practical application, when interpreted by commanders of armies or battalions.

The great International Conventions of Paris in 1856, of Geneva in 1864 and 1868, of St. Petersburg in 1868, of Brussels in 1874, and the recent peace symposium of The Hague, while mainly convened for the purpose of ameliorating the horrors and cruelties of war and of universalizing the Code of Honor among nations, were also instrumental in improving the administration of military justice, thus paving the way to discipline, as well as to peace and a resumption of the government by law. It is no vain boasting to say, that all of those International Conventions, except that of Paris, followed logically and chronologically what may be termed the greatest Army War Code ever issued by a Nation, and that written by an American philosopher, Dr. Francis Lieber, and published April, 1863, by our War Department "for the guidance of the land forces of the United States," under the title "Instructions for Armies in the Field." They embodied the fundamental rules by which commanders of armies, departments and districts, are to be guided in their treatment of the inhabitants, subject to their martial control. This War Code—so to call it—covers almost every question of martial law, military jurisdiction, military necessity, retaliation, revenue and levies, protection of enemy's property and person, religion, arts and sciences, punishment of crimes, deserters, prisoners, hostages, booty, scouts, spies, flags of truce, safe conduct, exchange of prisoners, parole, etc.

I regret I have neither time nor space for present elaboration of this magnificent document, but a few terse citations, pertinent to the occasion, may not be out of place:

"Martial law is the immediate and direct effect and consequence of occupation or conquest. The presence of a hostile army proclaims its martial law."

"Martial law is simply military authority exercised in accordance with the laws and usages of war. Military oppression is not military law; it is the abuse of the power which that law confers. As martial law is executed by military force, it is incumbent upon those, who administer it, to be strictly guided by the principles of justice, honor and humanity—virtues adorning a soldier more than other men, for the very reason that he possesses the power of his arms against the unarmed."

"Military jurisdiction is of two kinds, first, that conferred by statute; second that derived from the common law of war."

"The first is exercised by courts martial; the second by military commissions."

"Military control necessarily does not admit of cruelty," "nor of torture to extort confessions." "It admits of deceptions, but disclaims acts of perfidy."

"Troops who fight in the uniform of their enemies" "can expect no quarter." "The use of the enemy's flag or other emblem of nationality for the purpose of deceiving the enemy in battle is an act of perfidy."

The last few paragraphs seem to have not been very recently studied by certain of our warriors in the Philippines, although President McKinley in his instructions to General Otis, then in command on those Islands, under date of December 21, 1898, reiterated its most humane provisions. Indeed, he went much farther, and said:

"It will be the duty of the commander of the forces of occupation to announce and proclaim, in the most public manner, that we come, not as invaders or conquerors, but as friends, to protect the natives in their homes, in their employment and in their personal and religious rights."

This is the famous Convent on the island of Luzon near Manila, which was used by the Tenth Regiment on the night of July 31, 1898, as a protection for their hospital in the rear. In front and at the sides may be seen the earthworks, behind which part of the regiment fought in that battle of Malate, which was the first conflict between Spanish and American troops in the Philippines. The regiment lost that night seven killed and thirty-five wounded.

He was elected, in 1896, to the Fifty-sixth Congress. He has been actively engaged in the practice of law at Greensburg and is largely interested in the coal business, being an official and closely identified with the following corporations: Pittsburg & Baltimore Coal Co., Western Pennsylvania Fuel Co., Robbins Coal Co., Pittsburg Coal Co., Westmoreland Light, Fuel and Power Co., and Wilmerding Land Co. He is also connected with the legal department of the B. & O. R. R. Co., and organized the Safe Deposit & Trust Co. of Greensburg.

LIEUTENANT COLONEL WILLIAM T. LINDSEY

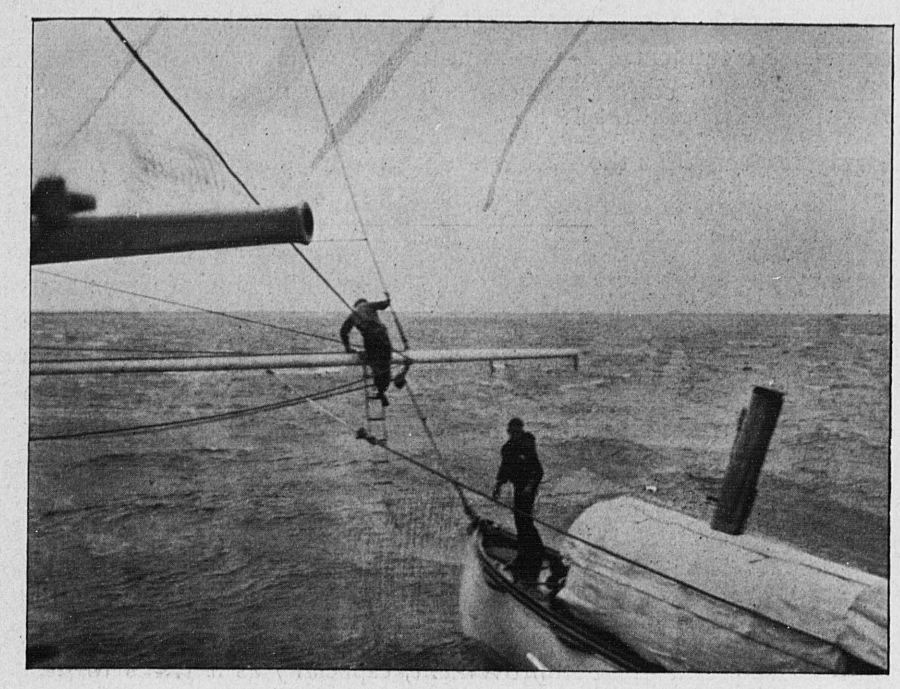
Colonel William T. Lindsey, aide-de-camp on the staff of the commander-in-chief, is a personal and life long friend of Governor Stone and while but recently connected with the National Guard of Pennsylvania has always been greatly interested in its welfare, especially in the Pittsburg commands.

He was born in Washington County, Pennsylvania, and educated in the public schools and at Vermillion Institute, Ohio, where he read law. He is Clerk in the U. S. District Court for the western district of Pennsylvania and has been connected with that office for the past thirty years. He is also president of the West Elizabeth Bridge Company and a prominent member of the Society of the Sons of the Revolution.

MAJOR EDWARD B. McCORMICK

Major Edward B. McCormick, Judge Advocate of the Second Brigade, well known throughout the State as one of the veteran officers of the "Fighting Tenth", entered the service in Company "I", Tenth Infantry, June, 1891. His executive ability was soon noticed by his superior officers and on July 6, 1893, the late Colonel Hawkins recommended his appointment as battalion adjutant. He was reappointed, May 4, 1894, and on April 15, 1895, he assumed the arduous duties of regimental quartermaster, which office then ranked as first lieutenant. During the Spanish-American War, he served as quartermaster of the Tenth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry and rendered valuable service to his command during their station in the Philippines. Major McCormick is a prominent lawyer, and a member of the Westmoreland County Bar.

ANNUAL CRUISE OF OUR NAVAL MILITIA



The Naval Battalion completed on August 11th what all the members consider was the best cruise that they have had in the history of the organization. The Navy Department was requested early in the season by Commander Ruschenberger to give the Naval Militiamen an eight days' cruise in a regular service vessel, and in response to the request the Department assigned the U. S. S. Panther, a 4600 ton cruiser, for the duty.

The Battalion embarked on board the Panther August 4, about 10 o'clock in the morning, after having sent ice and other stores, &c., on board earlier in the day. The men were at once assigned their places in the ship's "Watch Quarter and Station Bill," and the ship then got under way and proceeded down the bay to the ocean and then headed for Cape Cod and Provincetown, which was reached on the 6th, early in the morning. The whole of the Second Division of the Ship's Company was made up of the militiamen, and all the work and routine of that division was performed by them, in addition to this an officer and twelve petty officers and men were assigned to the Sixth, or Engineers' Division, and assigned to all the work on the upper platform of the engine room, as well as to certain other work in running feed pumps as in that department, and four quartermasters were assigned to the Navigators Division, and stood with the regular service quartermasters and performed their share of the work on the bridge. Later in the cruise one of the crew having been injured the dynamo also was turned over to one of the militiamen every third watch to run.

At Provincetown the time was principally occupied in sub-calibre target practice and boat drills. Although the former was finally so interfered with as to have to be abandoned on account of the arrival of the fleet of the New York Yacht Club, some 75 strong, which came in on the 8th in a stiff blow, with sails well reefed, and though very beautiful, seemed to cover the whole bay after anchoring, so that you couldn't shoot anywhere for fear of killing millionaires.

One of the features of the boat work was a sailing race for cutters carrying jib foresail and mainsail, and steered by petty officers with crews of eight men. The course was a triangular one twice around the Panther and the targets, a distance of about three miles, and was won by Quartermaster F. C. Vail's boat, with Cox. Mason's boat second and Boatswain Mate S. H. Vail's boat third. Another race, which was looked forward to with a good deal of pecuniary and other interest, was a rowing race in cutters, in which the engine room force of the Reserves, most of whom had rowed in the 4th of July race on the Schuylkill, challenged any crew that could be made up out of the whole ship's company. Unfortunately rough weather prevented the race coming off, and the next day the Panther went to sea for target practice.

Target practice, a thing in which the Pennsylvania Militia usually have gotten the best ratings of any of the militias, was this year not as good as usual, but as the 4 and 5 inch guns had only just been fitted with new telescopic sights, the Pennsylvanians say that that explains it; and certain it is that one of the regular officers, who was going to show "how to do it," seemed to have lost the knack himself, much to his surprise.

In everything else the militiamen showed up excellently, and everyone commented upon the amount of technical knowledge displayed, especially by the p. o. s. and their ability to handle the men.

The return to League Island Navy Yard was made in a smooth sea, but there was some delay due to fog, and all hands were finally mustered on board the U. S. S. St. Louis at 5.30 on August 11th, and then "pipe down" and off home.

This year's cruise differed from all previous ones made under command of regular service officers in the amount of actual authority given to the volunteer officers and men, and was correspondingly more interesting and valuable. On this cruise the Naval Militia officer of the deck was in actual command and gave the necessary commands for handling the ship. And all the seamen who had sufficient preliminary training were given their trick at the wheel. Every man who was given anything to do was allowed to do it himself without too many suggestions from others.

As a result, all hands are full of appreciation of Commander Wilson, who was in command, and of Lieut. Commander Parker, the regular service executive officer and their way of treating volunteers.

WHEN the commander-in-chief ordered General J. P. S. Gobin to assume command of the strike situation in the anthracite coal regions, he knew well the peculiar ability and knowledge the General possessed in a service of this nature. He is not only thoroughly familiar with the entire surroundings but has made a study of the foreign element in the coal fields, of which fact they are becoming aware. As an illustration of his ability to handle these people, we relate an incident that occurred on the evening of Wednesday, August 20th, when a committee, comprising Messrs. Davis, Flaherty and Brennan of the Teamsters' Union waited upon him and entered a vigorous protest against Captain Livingston B. Rausch, quartermaster of the Eighth Infantry, who, they claimed, was discriminating against them by giving the preference of the hauling to a local liveryman by the name of O'Hara. They said O'Hara is a very wealthy man and in as much as their means were limited and their teams standing idle, they should get a share of the work. General Gobin listened very patiently to their statements and then asked whether they had made an effort, on the morning of the arrival of the troops, to assist the quartermaster's department in the hauling of the equipage, and whether it was not true that they had refused two years ago, as a matter of strike sympathy, to do the hauling for the State. They could not very well answer these questions but argued that Mr. Brennan was on hand at six o'clock on the morning of the arrival of the first troops and had offered his services to Captain Rausch, who gave him very little satisfaction. The General thought Mr. Brennan was the only one of the three who deserved consideration, but politely and firmly refused to break the contract with Mr. O'Hara, whose services for the State were being faithfully and satisfactorily performed. He also pointed out to the three gentlemen the folly of their protest at so late a day, and advised them in the future to be more alive to their own business interests. They seemed to be deeply impressed and before departing, thanked the General cordially for his courteous treatment. A few minutes later, the writer overheard a portion of their conversation, in which they expressed themselves as being conscious of the mistake they had made, but which was highly respectful for the military commander.

CAPTAIN John S. Muckle, Naval aide on the Staff of Commander-in-chief, will shortly make a tour of the world, and before his departure will tender a reception to all the commissioned officers in the Guard and the Naval Militia. It is the intention of Captain Muckle to surpass all gatherings of the kind ever held in the history of the Guard.

WHILE the campaign hat is a very comfortable headgear, the practical substitution of the new khaki helmet by the United States Army is a great improvement, especially as it tends to give the troops a more uniform appearance. The defacing of the campaign hat seemed to be the first duty of a soldier after receiving the issue, and this in many cases gave the hat a burlesque appearance. Many different shapes were also devised and it is understood that the military board gave these facts serious consideration before the change was made.

DURING the labor troubles of 1900 Major William P. Clarke conceived the idea of forming a signal corps. He selected from the ranks of the several regiments on duty intelligent men who were willing to take up this important work and in a remarkably short time taught them the Morse code and had them supplied with the heliograph, flash light and wigwags. The work of this corps has proven invaluable in the present strike service. A station has been established on the roof of the Ferguson House where the men are in constant communication with the different parts of camp.

Personal Mention

Colonel Dechert is spending the summer at Point Pleasant, N. J.

Wm. C. Wallace, late Captain of Battery "B," spent several days with his old command at Camp Meade.

It is expected that Captain Ellsworth Kochersperger, formerly of the Sixth Infantry, will shortly connect himself with the Third.

Captain Theodore Maris, Company "I," and Second Lieutenant John F. Davies, Company "G," have tendered their resignations.

Captain Campbell, Company "L," visited Shenandoah and was entertained by General Gobin during his tour of duty at that point.

Captain Wm. T. Rees is highly pleased with Battery "B" as now constituted, and is looking for first place on the inspection and camp just held.

Lieutenant Powell, in charge of the camping party at Camp Meade, made one of the best records ever known in the Battery in getting camp in shape.

During the absence of Captain J. Clayton Erb, who is spending his vacation in Colorado, Colonel Price has detailed Lieutenant A. H. B. Jeffords as acting quartermaster of the Third Regiment.

Major Orlando L. Nichols, Quartermaster of the Third Brigade, is the happy winner of the magnificent set of horse equipments offered by General Miller for general all around efficiency.

Anthony J. Loeffler, who had his ear drum ruptured while firing the old brass Napoleon at Division Headquarters, Camp Meade, is getting along very nicely, although he suffers a great deal from the wound.

Colonel Price, in making his annual report to the Adjutant General, will recommend that next year's encampment be extended to at least ten days, and that legislative action be taken on the armory question throughout the State.

Captain J. O. J. Shellenberger, Company "G," Sixth Infantry, is prominently mentioned as a future candidate for the field of this regiment. He is an enthusiastic and efficient line officer and would without doubt fill such an advancement with great credit.

Captain Fred. R. Drake, Aide-de-camp Third Brigade Staff, has been detailed as Acting Quartermaster during the absence of Major Nichols. Captain Drake feels very much gratified with his experience in this department, particularly as it is his first active service.

Mr. William H. Lewis, a prominent, retired citizen of Shenandoah, tendered a dinner to the brigade, regimental and troop officers on August 15th. It proved a very enjoyable affair and the officers are loud in their praise of the hospitality accorded them by Mr. Lewis.

Colonel Rufus C. Elder, Fifth Infantry, is very much pleased with the work of his regiment at the recent encampment. The strength of the command is 492 officers and men, which is within thirty-two of the maximum strength allowed by the State. As the regiment has but two battalions of eight companies, this is a remarkable showing.

Lieutenant Foulke, Inspector Rifle Practice, is hard at work rounding the regimental team into shape for the coming rifle matches, and from the confident smile he wears around the armory he expects great things from the boys. The Second Regiment will be represented at Sea Girt at the annual matches.

Colonel Frank K. Patterson, General Inspector of Rifle Practice, proposes to have a private mess for the State teams at Sea Girt, August 24th to September 7th. This will be a unique departure for Pennsylvania, and is likely to excite favorable comment, as it is strictly in keeping with the military work of the National Guard of Pennsylvania.

Captain Frederick A. Snyder, A. D. C. on General Gobin's staff, has organized an engineer corps, which is fully equipped with the military sketch case, compass and other instruments necessary for this branch. It is intended to have a number of men detailed for this purpose in each regiment of the Third Brigade and recommendation will be made to the Adjutant General to establish and equip an engineer detail in every command.

Captain E. D. Smythe, a particular friend of General Gobin, who served with him during the Rebellion in the 90th New York Volunteers, sent two immense watermelons to the General from Camp McKenzie, where the Captain is now located as postmaster. These were served at the supper on the evening of August 20th and were thoroughly enjoyed by the commander of the Third Brigade and his staff.

Captain Ott, commanding the Governor's Troop, is a firm believer in division encampments. Speaking of the regular cavalry at Camp Meade, he said he felt much good could be accomplished if the State troops were permitted to watch the regulars drill in place of going through the movements at the same time.

The site of the Troop at Shenandoah is all that can be desired except that the officer's quarters are placed, as the Captain puts it, "in echelon." The strength of the Troop is fifty-seven, there being but one man absent, who is on sick leave.

Mayor Diehl, of Pittsburg, chairman of the Hawkins Monument Committee, has appointed a number of gentlemen to select a design and report on the same at an early date. The one which seems to be most in favor is that of an equestrian statue of heroic size. This is to be placed in Shenley Park and unveiled in August next, at which time it is proposed to parade the Veteran Association of the Tenth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry and the entire Second Brigade. It is also stated that an effort will be made to have the Third Infantry of Philadelphia or a provisional organization representing the command present at the ceremony.

The writer has learned that the Department of Pennsylvania, Grand Army of the Republic, is making a strong bid to have the National Encampment held at Pittsburg in 1903. If the delegates are successful in securing the Encampment for the Smoky City, it would be well to have the unveiling ceremony at this time, as Colonel Hawkins, who commanded the Tenth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry during the Spanish-American conflict, was also a veteran of the Civil War, and the occasion would be made doubly interesting. Mayor Diehl and his committee might do well to consider this matter.

Captain Jacob A. Armbrust, Company "I," Tenth Regiment, will shortly tender his resignation, owing to pressure of business. First Lieutenant, Henry Coulter, will be advanced to the captaincy by a unanimous vote, and will make a very able successor to Captain Armbrust. Lieutenant Coulter is a veteran of the Philippines, having served in Company "I" during the entire campaign. He is a brother of Captain and Quartermaster Richard Coulter, Jr., of the Tenth Infantry. Both of these gentlemen are sons of General Richard Coulter, better known as "Fighting Dick Coulter," who commanded the Eleventh Pennsylvania Volunteer Regiment during the Civil War, and who, for gallant service, was breveted Brigadier General and afterward Major General of Volunteers.

NOTES

Bronze medals will be awarded this year to the winners of the skirmish match.

Improvements will soon start on the Armory recently purchased by members of Battery "B."

The members of Battery "B" express themselves with the writer when they say "they never enjoyed a better camp than the one just held on the battlefield of Gettysburg."

The men composing Foote's Fourth Regular Army Battery were entertained by the members of Battery "B." It proved to be quite a treat to the boys, and an enjoyable evening was spent.

The cross at present worn by the hospital corps, which is a modification of the cross of the Knights of St. John, will shortly be dispensed with, and in its place will appear the caduces, which was used some years ago by the medical department.

The Second Infantry contemplate giving several receptions during the coming season. These entertainments include a parade and review by the regiment, followed by dancing. These dances have become very popular, and the officers of the regiment encourage them, both for the social features and also for the better personnel of new men who are attracted by affairs of this kind.

"AN EARLY MORNING HOLD-UP" AT CAMP MEADE, GENERAL SCHALL AND STAFF

"Simpson Avenue," the name given the line officer's street, of Colonel Clement's Twelfth Infantry, is a model specimen of the voluntary handiwork of the men in this command. Originally the street was so uneven that the men thought of terracing and filling in the depressed parts. A layer of finely crushed stone was used for the surface, which is now as level as the floor of a ballroom and the "avenue" presents every appearance of a beautiful path in a public park.

The evening parade of the Eighth Regiment, August 20th, on the main street of Shenandoah was a splendid exhibition of steadiness and fine marching. Captain Umbenhauer's Company ("G," of the Fourth), which is temporarily attached to Colonel Hoffman's command, made a particularly fine showing with a solid front of twenty files. The passing in review was well executed and the several companies were warmly applauded by the thousands of spectators who lined the thoroughfare.

Since 1894 the Sixteenth Infantry has held the highest rating in the Division for guard duty. In that year Colonel Hulings inaugurated two guard mounts daily, one being marched to the guard quarters and the other to school, where under the instruction of a battalion adjutant they received thorough instruction in their duties, the school guard becoming the regular guard the following day. In addition to this, several tours are made during the day and night by officers detailed for that purpose, who test the knowledge of the sentinels while on post. The results each year are very satisfactory, and this manner of instruction accounts for the high standard of efficiency the regiment has attained in this particular branch.

CHELTENHAM MILITARY ACADEMY

Located on the summit of the Chelten Hills, nine miles north of Philadelphia, Cheltenham Military Academy has attained a leading position among American institutions of learning during its thirty-one years of existence, and has established for itself an enviable record as a high class college preparatory school. Its fame has spread to every section of the country, so that to-day there can be found among its students, boys from near and distant States, and even from foreign lands.

The academy was founded in 1871 by the late Rev. Dr. Samuel Clements, and has prepared more than 600 young men for successful college or business life. The institution commends itself particularly to those parents who desire for their boys a school whose location is easily accessible and yet rarely equaled for healthfulness and beauty of surroundings; a school in which the social relations are the very best, the morality that of Christian principles, and in which the instruction and discipline are of the highest order; a school in which the boy is taught to work from right motives, and every proper effort is made for his comfort and happiness, and in which a higher value is placed upon the boy himself than upon proficiency in studies; a school limited as to the number of pupils, thus securing select companionship and a home life not found in larger institutions, and making it possible for the boys to enjoy intimate personal association with the principal and instructors.

CORRESPONDENCE

EDITOR "OUR STATE ARMY AND NAVY" JOURNAL,
Philadelphia, Pa.

DEAR SIR:—I am a former commissioned officer in the Third Brigade, and witnessed the review of the Division at Camp Meade on August 18th. The Twelfth Infantry, Colonel Clement, carried a distinctive flag, which seemed much larger than those carried by the other commands, the field being composed of circles of gilded stars. It was generally commented upon, and I concluded that the regiment had been given some special privilege to carry this flag.

A reply through your columns will be appreciated by

A SUBSCRIBER.

Subscriber, former Commissioned Officer Third Brigade:

We do not know of any general or special order giving the Twelfth Infantry the right to carry a distinctive standard. The regiments have all been furnished with the full regulation national colors, 52x66 inches, the field composed of 45 stars embroidered in white silk, and the number of the regiment with the inscription "National Guard of Pennsylvania," likewise embroidered in white silk, on the centre red stripe. The State flag, which is of blue silk, with the State coat of arms painted on each side, has a flowing streamer at the bottom, on which is inscribed the number and arm of the regiment.
